HOOVER NOT TO ACTIVELY CAMPAIGN

ONLY FEW SPEECHES PLAN OF PRESIDENT IN ELECTION DRIVE

Leaves Campaign To Sanders; Two Busy
To Take Part

WASHINGTON, June 18.—President Hoover today issued a formal statement declaring his campaign headquarters will be established in Chicago and New York and that he "will not take part in the forthcoming campaign" for his re-election.

The President's statement said he would, however, make "a few major addresses expounding policies of the administration."

Mr. Hoover said that he probably would not be able to go to Los Angeles to open the Olympic games there in July.

The President's statement follows:

"I have informed Republican leaders that except for a few major addresses expounding policies of the administration I will not take part in the forthcoming campaign as my undivided attention must be given to the duties of my office.

"The campaign will be conducted and managed entirely by Chairman Sanders and the Republican organization. It has been settled that the offices of the Republican national committee should be moved from Washington and established at Chicago and New York. Mr. Sanders will be visiting Washington in the course of a few days to complete these arrangements.

"In accordance with the tradition since their beginning that heads of states should open the Olympic games, I had hoped to avail myself of that pleasure and I had also hoped to spend a few weeks at my home at Stanford University but at this moment this seems impossible as my paramount duty is here."

CLEVELAND BLAST IS STILL MYSTERY

CLEVELAND, June 18.—Cause of the explosion and fire which wrecked the six story Ellington Apartment June 7, remained undetermined today as Coroner A. J. Pearce weighed the testimony adduced at a two-day inquiry.

Sharp difference of opinion existed between investigators as well as witnesses as to the cause of the blast which claimed thirteen lives. Some of the investigators believed leaking gas was responsible and others felt gasoline or some other highly combustible liquid was the cause.

THRIFTY CITIZENS ON BUYING SPREE BEFORE TAX STARTS

WASHINGTON, June 18.—Thrifty citizens the country over have gone on a buying spree in order to avoid the new excise taxes which become effective in three days.

Reports to the bureau of internal revenue indicate that thousands of persons are saving pennies, and dollars, by last-minute purchases of gasoline, lubricating oil, tires, automobiles, mechanical refrigerators, cameras and other taxable items. In many localities merchants are advertising "pre-tax" sales.

Wholesalers and retailers as well as individuals are building up reserve stocks of goods, for the new taxes do not apply to retail sales but only to those goods which pass out of the hands of the manufacturers after midnight June 20.

Oil tankers at sea are making for port with all possible speed to evade the gasoline and petroleum tariff which goes into effect on the same day.

Oil companies reported large sales of gasoline and lubricating oil to individuals. The tax on gasoline is one cent a gallon and on lubricating oil four cents a gallon.

The three-cent postage rate starts July 5. The increased income taxes apply to incomes for this entire year, but are not payable until next March 15.

BRINKERT OFFERED TO CONFRONT MAID IN LINDBERGH CASE

Action Would Have Prevented Suicide He Claims

ALPINE, N. J., June 18.—Ernest Brinkert, voluntary witness in the Lindbergh kidnapping, offered to confront Violet Sharpe before she killed herself, he revealed before his release today.

Such action, according to one theory, would have saved the servant girl in the Dwight Morrow home, for she killed herself after identifying a picture of Brinkert as the man she rode with the night of the kidnapping.

That identification was shown to be false when Ernest Miller, a youth living in a nearby village, proved that he, not Brinkert, accompanied the girl on that night.

Brinkert made his offer, he said, to a man who represented himself to be from the department of justice.

Six days, said Brinkert, "before Miss Sharpe committed suicide a man named Murphy from the department of justice came to where I was working and asked me about her. I offered to go with him, right then and there, to confront her."

"He said that wasn't necessary, but asked me for my chauffeur's license, which had my picture on it. I gave it to him. I heard no more about the case until last Friday."

Miss Sharpe killed herself several hours after she had identified the photograph of Brinkert. She had just been notified she was to be questioned again by police in investigating the kidnapping.

FIRE HOUSE BURNS

NORWOOD, Pa., June 18.—Members of the Norwood fire company were aroused by an alarm early today and had to run from the fire instead of to it. Their own 2-story brick building was in flames.

Two persons were injured in attempting to get apparatus out of the building.

DEMOCRATS GATHER IN CHICAGO; FIGHT ON SHOUSE STARTED

Roosevelt Forces On Hand; Smith To Arrive Tuesday

CHICAGO, June 18.—Business began to pick up today along "candidates row" in the Congress Hotel where numerous seekers after the Democratic presidential nomination have arranged headquarters for the duration of their forthcoming convention.

The first blast of the intra-party struggle came when a representative of Speaker John N. Garner made the barbed suggestion that Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt's campaign manager should be awarded the political decoration of the order of the "double cross."

Roosevelt's manager, James A. Farley of New York, prepared to establish general headquarters here today.

His first work will concern organization of the fight to defeat J. Edgar Hoover, chairman of the Democratic national executive committee, for permanent chairman of the convention.

Shouse is already on the ground establishing his organization.

Roosevelt forces are out to name Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana as permanent chairman because of their belief that Shouse has been covertly aiding the Smith-Raskob group in its anti-Roosevelt activities.

Thus before the Republicans are barely out of town, the Democrats are moving in, laying the lines for the opening of their convention June 27, and apparently heading in to a good lively family fracas.

Former Governor Alfred E. Smith will arrive Tuesday as will national Chairman Raskob. Members of the resolutions committee are due here Thursday to begin sittings in the hope of drafting much of the platform in advance.

Shouse predicted on his arrival here that the Democrats would go further in their prohibition plank than the Republicans but would not advocate outright repeal.

In his opinion the Democratic plank will provide for modification of the 18th amendment in a way that will protect dry states but which will permit states desiring to do so to withdraw from the prohibition experiment. The chief difference which Shouse anticipates between the Republican and Democratic platform is that the Democrats will avoid the Republican plan of giving congress the right to prescribe the detailed provisions of sale and distribution of liquor for states which choose to restore liquor.

"I doubt very much," Shouse said "that the Democratic party will go on record for repeal."

Fifty or more sample prohibition planks have been received for the consideration of the platform committee.

The fight of Shouse to become permanent chairman will start the Democratic convention off with a good old-fashioned struggle. It will constitute the first show-down between the Roosevelt and the anti-Roosevelt forces. Shouse claims that Roosevelt promised to support him for the chairmanship. Roosevelt, however, recently after intimating that Shouse was giving aid and comfort to the enemy.

This situation caused Speaker Garner's Texas campaign manager, State Senator Walter F. Wood of Houston to issue a sharp-edged statement.

After remarking pointedly that

FRANCE IS OPPOSED TO CANCELLATION; POLICY IS DEBATED

Germany Chagrined As Alteration Plan
Suggested

LAUSANNE, June 18.—The Lausanne state, showing $50,000,000 in war debts and reparations payments due July 1 suspended, was turned to the wall today as statesmen decided whether to wipe the slate clean or fill it with new figures.

Great Britain, Italy, and Germany stood for cancellation. France and her allies wanted alteration.

The statesmen will hold private conversations until the conference meets again Tuesday, but a private moratorium for Europe appeared to be the only possible development until the United States modifies its attitude.

The Germans were at first pleased by the suspension, thinking it indicated that a final solution would be found by the conference. "The speeches of Edouard Herriot and Neville Chamberlain impressed me as animated by goodwill, the best indication for success of the conference," Chancellor Von Papen said.

But the Germans were chagrined later to find that certain powers, headed by France, considered that the suspension might continue either until Washington changes its mind or France is assured that cancellation would not make Germany economically and politically stronger than France.

The British, who sacrifice most by the suspension, insisted that it was only a temporary interpretation. They held that the declaration was issued purely to relieve pressure and to improve the psychological spirit of the conference, with the understanding that a definite and final solution should be found at Lausanne.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—While preserving an aloof attitude toward the Lausanne reparations conference, administration officials are gradually working out a yardstick to apply to debtor countries when and if they ask this country for revision.

One well-posted official defined the yardstick as providing two measurements: 1. capacity to pay; 2. the leniency or strictness of the applying country's original debt settlement.

Thus countries having a large gold surplus, little unemployment and a good trade balance, might be expected to pay in full. Nations in dire economic straits might have their debts scaled down temporarily.

Smaller Business Already Gaining; Larger To Follow

CHICAGO, June 18.—Charles G. Dawes, retiring president of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation expressed the belief on arriving here today that the country has reached "the turning point" in the depression.

Dawes based his prediction upon the general improvement in the fall business enterprises of the country in the formal statement issued here which was treated with a good deal of significance because of the close insight he has into business conditions as head of the R. F. C.

"Coming as I do from my work at Washington on the R. F. C. where one gets in its fair perspective the general business situation in the country, I believe that we have reached the turning point in the depression," Dawes said in his statement, which he handed to newspapermen as he stepped from the train here today.

"It is the smaller business enterprises with low overhead expenses which seems to be showing improvement; but in time the larger ones will necessarily follow."

"The recovery in the depression will start from the bottom up, not from the top down. That is what past experience shows."

"For all the real evidences of reaction we must look to the past attitude of our people not to the shifting opinions of certain sections of it."

"For instance, I would attribute much more importance to the increases of electric power consumption in the country during the last two weeks than to stock or bond quotations. It is the average man and the average man's business which is the main factor in the situation. His business in the aggregate is enormous."

"With the forced economies and reduced inventories in both our large and small enterprises which have been effected the last year, we need for profitable business in many lines no return to the prices of a few years ago, but only a moderate increase. The oil industry, for instance, is now demonstrating this."

"In the general interests there must now be in government, state and municipal administrations the same liquidation in expenditures which individuals and private enterprises have already effected."

"Taxes must come down and this must result primarily from reduced government expenditures, national, state, and municipal. That is essential to the full recovery of business."

"The President pointed out the other day that in the ten years ending with 1930 the federal government decreased its indebtedness by nearly 31 per cent, whereas, the municipalities increased their indebtedness by nearly 60 per cent."

We must remember that municipalities present the greatest tax problem—great as the others are—and that work for tax reduction will be effective largely in proportion as it has specific and local objectives."

Upon his arrival here at 9 a. m. Dawes immediately took up the direction of his private affairs, going to the Central Republic Bank and Trust of which he is honorary chairman of the board. He was accompanied from Washington by Mrs. Dawes and was met at the station by his brother, Henry M. Dawes.

NEW LEXINGTON, June 18.—Ray Householder, 20, a farmer, today owed his life to the fact that he carried a picture of his girlfriend and a bank book in his coat pocket.

Householder had been calling on Miss Lucy Skinner and on the way home pistol shots were fired at him.

Two crashed his windshield, a third went through his coat and the picture and bank book, hitting him on the arm.

Sheriff Clifford Wilson had several suspects under surveillance and was trying to ascertain if the ambush was by a jealous rival. Householder was only slightly wounded.

WIRE-TAPPING RING CAUGHT; DEFAUDED TELEGRAPH LINES

COLUMBUS, O., June 18.—Using one of the greatest telegraphic networks ever turned over to police work, police in three cities have captured the alleged ringleader of a wire tapping gang which is said to have obtained $6500 from the Western Union Telegraph Co. since the first of June.

A woman was being held in Columbus, and a man was arrested in St. Louis yesterday.

For several days detectives here have been questioning in secret a woman named Flo Hadley, 30, it was disclosed after the St. Louis arrest was made.

In her room here, detectives discovered $2100, a false grey wig, spectacles, telegraph instruments and a suitcase packed and containing passports to Australia, according to Thomas Scully, assistant detective chief.

Main operations of the ring were in Michigan, where more than $5,000 was obtained at one time. The gang operated by cutting in on wires near Eaton and Howell, Mich. It was said, and perhaps in other small towns adjacent to large cities.

In effect they would set up a standard relay office. When their plans were entirely ready, they would send messages in Western Union code ordering money to be paid to a certain person at a distant point.

An apparently aged woman, grey-haired and spectacled, obtained the money.

The gang was well versed in Western Union methods—all details including investigation had been arranged. The men arrested and the man sought were former railroad telegraph operators. It was not known where or how they obtained knowledge of the code used in sending money telegrams.

An attempt was made to cut in to the Columbus wire at a deserted spot fourteen miles east of the city on April 29, according to telegraph company officials. No money was obtained here.

Scully said the gang is supposed to have also made money buying stocks, cutting in on stock ticker wires and sending false reports.

Besides the passports, a guide book for Australia was found in the woman's room, police said. Scully said he believed the gang was going there to work the same racket.

The man held in St. Louis gave his name as Leonard Hagey. He was picked up in a hotel there. In his car were found a set of telegraphic linemen's tools and a pistol, St. Louis police said.

Machine gunners cut down Johnny Nyhan, known to authorities as an independent beer operator, at his Crooked Lake resort a few miles from the city.

Nyhan's wife was a witness to the killing which was conducted by three men armed with a machine gun and revolvers.

Most notorious of those slain since Thursday was George (Red) Barker, Capone lieutenant and labor racketeer, also killed by machine gunners.

Police had instructions today to round up every known leader of the Capone syndicate in the belief Barker's death resulted from an interneccine quarrel for leadership.

Police believed the Nyhan slaying resulted from the beer dealer's refusal to deal with the syndicate.

FARMER SENTENCED TO ELECTRIC CHAIR

MILLERSBURG, O., June 18.—Herbert Meeker, 23-year-old Wayne County farmer, today was under sentence to die in the electric chair for the murder of his wife, Gertrude, 18.

A verdict of first-degree murder, without recommendation of mercy, was returned by the jury late last night after seven hours' deliberation.

It was the first time in the history of Holmes County courts that the death penalty was imposed. The verdict makes a death sentence mandatory. Sentence will be pronounced Tuesday by Common Pleas Judge R. B. Putnam.

DREAMS BLASTED BY SENATE GROUP WILL CONTINUE EFFORTS

Change Of Heart By Senators Hope Of Advocates

WASHINGTON, June 18.—Unrest stirred in the ranks of the bonus expeditious force today and tattered veterans, their dreams of a cash bonus shattered, began a grim struggle to impress their plight upon the nation.

In answer to a summons from their commander in chief, the veterans swarmed over the Anacostia mud flats to a huge rally called to strengthen their morale after the senate's death blow to the bonus bill last night.

"We are going to get more and more men as fast as we can and stay here until we change the minds of these senators," vowed Commander-in-Chief Walter W. Waters, whose stalwart band from Oregon has grown into an army of 15,000 drawn from the nation's destitute.

Waters and his co-leaders spoke confidently of having 25,000 men here within a week and 50,000 or 100,000 by the time congress meets again in December.

What the veterans actually will do, no one knows. The authorities still hope that sober reflection on the present futility of their mission will turn them homeward—there to campaign in the elections against congressmen who voted against the $2,400,000,000 bonus bill.

But the thousands of ragged veterans who trudged back to their miserable quarters in Anacostia after waiting hours in front of the capitol for the senate vote seemed as determined as their leaders to stick it out.

"We have nothing to do or eat at home," one put it. "We'll sit right here until they pay that bonus."

The bonus will not be paid by this session of congress, that is certain. The senate killed the bill by the overwhelming majority of sixty-two to eighteen and then nailed down the coffin lid by voting forty-four to twenty-six to table a motion to reconsider.

The eighteen who favored the bonus were: Republicans—Blaine, Wis.; Brookhart, Ia.; Frazier, N. D.; Norbeck, S. D.; Robinson, Ind.; Schall, Minn.; Stetson, Ore.; Democrats—Ashurst, Ariz.; Black, Ala.; Bratton, N. M.; Broussard, La.; Byrnes, S. C.; Caraway, Ark.; McGill, Kans.; Neely, W. Va.; Sheppard, Tex.; Wheeler, Mont.; Farmer-Labor—Shipstead, Minn.; Senators Thomas, Dem., Okla., and Bankhead, Dem., Ala., favored the bonus but voted "No" so they could enter the motion for reconsideration.

The senate's opposition to the bonus had been clearly indicated, and even if the bill had passed it would have met an insurmountable presidential veto. Yet the veterans had seen the measure revived and forced through the house by the pressure of their presence. They hoped desperately that the senate too would capitulate and they tried to impress the legislators by a demonstration unparalleled in Washington's history.

Hundreds of them, in faded blue shirts, overalls and worn khaki jammed the galleries and sat patiently while the senatorial debates droned on and on from 11 a. m. until after 8 p. m.

Before noon a thousand of their comrades planted themselves down outside the capitol building. And then toward evening, 4,000 more came marching over from their sordid camp on the Anacostia flats. Police turned back added hundreds by opening up a drawbridge over the eastern branch of the Potomac which the men had to cross. Police blockaded other bridges and cut off the Anacostia section of the city for two hours.

Nerves became taut as the 5,000 massed in front of the capitol, but throughout the entire demonstration there was not a trace of disorder. Squadrons of police were held ready in the corridors of the capitol basement. Police Chief Pelham Glassford refrained, however, from any show of force outside.

Instead he sent a half dozen of jovial patrolmen to circulate among the crowd and joke with veterans. He called up portable kitchen equipment and served hot dogs to all army corps on the lawn of the congressional library across the plaza.

As evening wore into night, the senate's vote was announced. There was a brief chorus of boos.

Then a bugler in faded olive drab rose and played "America." The men snapped to attention bared their heads and sang.

Commander Waters fought his way through the crowd and addressed his forces.

"The bill is beaten," he said. "We have had a temporary set back. But we are here to stay and I have told them in there that we will stick it out. We are going to get more men as fast as we can."

"Take it on the chin like Americans and fight it out. We're disappointed, but not discouraged."

"This vote means that some of the men in the senate are not fit to be there. It's part of our work to see that those who voted

A basket supper was enjoyed and later music was furnished by the "Washboard Entertainers" of Xenia. The remainder of the evening was spent socially.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Merton Wallace and family, Fred McNeill, Mr. and Mrs. Hodson Davis and family, Mrs. Enoch Davis and granddaughter, Miss Ruth Ellen Strider, Mrs. Aaron Freeland, Mrs. Lorena Conard, Messrs. Trubee Mickle, Ralph Rothwell, William Beard and Albert Reno, all of Wilmington; Mr. and Mrs. Earl Dabe and family and Mrs. Esto Wolford and family, Mr. and Mrs. William Harris, Messrs. Pearl and James Blackburn, Howard Luck, Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Shattuck, daughter, Miss Mabel Miller, Mrs. Cordia Neversant, all of Xenia; Mr. and Mrs. William Ode and family, the Misses Arvela Sturgeon and Edith Riggs, Messrs. Edgar, Noah, Clarence, Victor and Leon Riggs and the guests of honor, Mr. and Mrs. Riggs.

"PHILIPPINE ISLANDS" HERE

AN interesting program on the Philippine Islands, in charge of Mrs. H. E. Kiernan, was presented at the June meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church at the home of Mrs. W. H. Tilford, N. Detroit St., Friday afternoon.

As a special feature of the program Mrs. Kiernan read excerpts of letters from her son, Mr. John Kiernan, who is located in the Philippines. She also displayed many interesting pictures of scenes there sent her by her son. Mrs. J. W. Prugh read an article on the government of the islands.

Miss Effie Hempelman opened the meeting with a devotional period, assisted by Mrs. Flora Alexander who read an inspiring article, "Roses." A social hour followed the meeting and refreshments were served by Mrs. Tilford assisted by Mrs. Anna M. Haversick, Mrs. Flora Alexander, Mrs. W. B. McCallister, Mrs. J. W. McCollum, Mrs. H. C. Armstrong and Miss Jean B. Elwell.

RECENT BRIDE IS FETED AT "SHOWER"

Miss Grace Allamon, S. Detroit St., entertained a group of friends at her home Thursday evening honoring Mrs. David Short (Irene Teach), a recent bride. Contests were enjoyed and each of the guests wrote "letters of advice" to Mrs. Short. Later Patty Ann Jun, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Jun, entered the room, pulling a small wagon in which there was a miscellaneous array of gifts, which she presented to Mrs. Short.

Later refreshments were served, a color scheme of pink and white being used in the appointments. Those present were Mrs. Short, the Misses Florence Andrew, Margaret Tindall, Florence Sherrod, Evelyn Jay, Dorothy Burba, Jerry and Patty Ann Jun, Mrs. Earl Short, Mrs. Thomas Teach, Mrs. Charles Allamon and the hostess.

ENTERTAIN FARM BUREAU ON FRIDAY EVENING

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Wilson, Wilmington Pike, entertained seventy-five members of the Caesar Creek Farm Bureau at their home Friday evening. Miss Verna Elinger, of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, Columbus, was guest speaker, her subject being, "Our Home and Our Community."

Music was furnished by the Caesar Creek Grange quartet composed of Messrs. Edgar Gravit, Elbert Mescher, Vernon Shambaugh and James Lundy and Mr. Emory Oglesbee played two cornet solos. Readings were given by Mrs. J. B. Mason and Barbara Jean Mason.

Following the program refreshments of ice cream, strawberries, and cake were served.

The Misses Reva and Mary Dakin will be soloists at the evening services at the Friends Church Sunday at 7:30 o'clock.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Attend unto my cry; for I am brought very low; deliver me from my persecutors; for they are stronger than I.—Psalm cxxxix, 6.

CONDUCTING TESTS

Scientists at Ohio State University are conducting tests bearing upon the heredity of hemophilia, the rare tendency to bleed freely from the slightest cut or wound.

Rare as the disease is, its victims generally are men, though women are known to be carriers of the disease. The history of the relatively few cases on record shows that only one in nine of hemophilic males lives to be 22 years of age. The former heir apparent to the Spanish throne is perhaps the best known of those now on record.

In an article in the Ohio Journal of Science, Dr. Laurence H. Snyder of the department of zoology at the university, takes issue with the recent statement by another investigator that women who transmit the disease must potentially have it.

The ailment is known to have something to do with a deficiency in the sex mechanism. Scientists, however, are still trying to unravel the mystery of its cause and how to treat it.

Protein injections have been found efficacious as a control for hemophilia.

Occasional cases of suspended hemophilia are found upon more thorough investigation not to be true hemophilia. Dr. Snyder reports that three Ohio families were referred to him as having hemophilic females, but he said, "upon laboratory diagnosis, no evidence of true hemophilia was found."

SOME COMFORT

It may be some comfort for the man in the street to know that whatever other troubles he has, the weather will not add to his distress by swinging to extremes of temperature for the next 500 years, if the findings of scientists are reliable.

Three men, working independently, have come to the conclusion that important weather circles terminate every 630 or 640 years. Within these major arcs are smaller ones, generally lasting six years each, so that the long cycles advance by six-year progressions. One of the scientific trio traced low sea levels; another studied human migrations; while the third based his deliberations on tree rings and clay varves. In all three the dates of recurrence come within 630 or 640 years of each other. The student of migration stated that empty stomachs, rather than desire for conquest, had driven races or nations restlessly from one part of the world to another. Hence it is noteworthy that after a migration crest in 1170 A. D., none was recorded for the Eighteenth Century, although a low sea level was struck in 1800 and a weather cycle peak in 1778. Perhaps the rise of the American colonies in the Eighteenth Century might be considered a form or result of migration.

The next cycle is due to end some time between 2418 and 2450 A. D. Whether human migration will occur then may be doubtful. Nature continues to follow her own immutable laws, but human beings have made the world smaller and the universal distribution of food more possible.

MUCH TO DO

Learning that in the opinion of the President, the Federal budget is not yet balanced, Senator Robinson, Democratic leader in the Upper House, wants Mr. Hoover to tell Congress where it can effect new economies, and he makes his request somewhat in the form of a defiant challenge.

Perhaps Congress might be helped by some advice in addition to that already furnished by the White House, but it does not need to wait with hands folded until the President speaks.

So far, there has been no consolidation of the Army and Navy departments. Nothing has been done to produce economies in the foreign trade service, although there is plenty of room for saving there. The franking abuse continues unchecked. No curb has been placed on Congressional "perquisites" in the way of allowances for unnecessary clerk hire or in the form of excessive transportation allowances. Expensive and unnecessary bureaucracy continues practically untouched. There is plenty of opportunity in Washington for the many little savings which, added together, will make one big one.

THE FISCAL ROAD BACK

The advice of the League of Nations Gold Delegation that the world should return to the gold standard is not in itself of exceptional moment. The fact is that it cannot be followed. What is of more interest is the correlative advice that the world should do something to remedy the conditions that precipitated the abandonment of a common standard. The chief condition is the mass of restrictions impeding world trade.

In pre-war days the gold standard operated more or less automatically as an instrument to keep world trade in balance. A country would find itself in debt on its current transactions. Gold flowed out to pay the deficit. In the receiving country the metal was used as the base for issuing more currency or allowing business men more credit. As the result of one or the other action, prices rose so that the gold-receiving country became a profitable place in which to sell. The nation that sent the gold then followed it up with goods. In turn the current balance turned against the gold-receiving country, with the result that it, too, had to send out gold to effect redress.

Gold was thus a regulator, an instrument. Imagine world commerce as a seaway with gold going back and forth continually to keep debts and credits in balance, and you get some idea of the functions of gold when used as a common standard of value.

Since the war, however, this kind of regulation has been stifled. Gold flows have not exercised their function in the enlargement of credit and currency; prices have not felt any impetus; consequently debtor nations have not been able to square their accounts in goods. Even where it would have been possible to make the ultimate adjustment in goods tariffs have suddenly shot up to keep them out. Gold has thus "stayed put" in the receiving countries, and debtors have had to use more metal in meeting capital as well as current debts. The upshot is the situation such as has arisen today in which many debtors have used up their available gold and have consequently had to leave the gold standard.

Some understanding in regard to these restrictions must precede any attempt again to set up a common standard of value, whether it be gold or anything else. Otherwise it would not work. In the political sphere nations can pay lip service to the international ideal while pursuing a nationalistic policy. In the financial sphere, however, the act must be suited to the promise, since financial internationalism cannot live in a world of economic nationalism. — Christian Science Monitor.

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL

AT SEA.—In the ship's smoker, as in every place of its kind, are signs warning travelers against professional gamblers. The caution, I am told by members of this ship's staff is well-nigh meaningless in these days.

And it isn't only straitened times which have depleted the ranks of that unscrupulous but engaging crew. They began to go about the time bowler hats, pound watch chains and checkered vests grew scarce. Of course, big-time gamblers here and there continued to flourish through a modern era, but most of them transferred into more lucrative lines ashore after the birth of the Racket spelled with a capital R. A veteran smoking room steward confided to me the case of a once thriving gambler who failed to make expenses during three crossings and at last, in genial desperation, squandered the few thousand francs he had garnered during the trip on a champagne party for his victims.

PEOPLE, PEOPLE

There is never a crossing without its quota of Men of Mystery. They are the folks whose names do not appear on the passenger list, who stroll about the decks wrapped in self-sufficient isolation, meeting casual attempts at acquaintance with an icy aloofness which provokes a wildfire of speculation.

Near my deck chair sits a tall gentleman with a shock of red hair neatly pompadoured and a pair of disconcerting green eyes. All attempts to find out who he is have been fruitless since the morning when a volunteer from the contingent of debutantes aboard passed a tray for donations to the steamship line's charities fund.

This is one of the worthiest of maritime causes, but when the obscure personage of the green eyes unbolted a heavy ulster and dropped a 5,000-franc note into the platter an audible gasp ran along the row of chairs. The young lady almost fainted and assured him he had made a mistake.

"I never make mistakes," he informed her distantly but somehow courteously, too, and resumed his staring out to sea.

EXPATRIATE

With my regrettable flair for personalities connected with the world's night life, of course I struck up an immediate and absorbing acquaintance with Paul Farrel, who's almost as well known among the gayer visitors to Paris as Joe Zelli.

Paul has owned, managed or had a finger in some half dozen Parisian night clubs. Apparently there is no one who isn't "one of the best friends I have on this earth" to Paul, and curiously, this claim to closeness with the rostrum of fame on two continents is apparently genuine.

He is a man of great worldliness, and for a long time has had to shift for himself in some of the most trying occupations extant. The Broadway night club game is tough enough, but it is good clean fun to be indulged in by softies compared to the late spot business in Paris.

Paul has a disarming smile and an untiring swiftness of riposte. He is a gay fellow, but beneath his geniality there is the hint of steel. You become certain that no waiter has ever chiseled him out of a franc.

NEARING PORT

The reception committee of gulls has appeared to float languidly astern as we approach Bishop's light. To me, this is the most thrilling hour of any voyage. More than once I have stood on deck and watched the dark, tattered coast line flung up by the Silly Isles off Land's End.

A faint green smudge in the air (is it, can it be heather?) and the pleasant sadness of ending a trip of almost incredible gaiety has set in.

Plymouth at 5 in the morning.

Defeat Of Senator Brookhart, Setback Of Senator Morrison Interest Students Of Politics

WASHINGTON.—Senator Smith W. Brookhart's defeat for renomination in Iowa recently, and Senator Cameron Morrison's defeat in the first round of his fight for renomination in North Carolina were two interesting events to students of politics, for various reasons.

Iowa is typically a Republican state. North Carolina is typically Democratic.

Their respective primary results are enlightening as to next November, but it is necessary to understand them. Luckily they both are very well represented in Washington, and I have been at considerable pains to seek information from notable public men—of course, in Senator Brookhart's case; North Carolinians, naturally in Senator Morrison's—with a view to as full a comprehension of the contrasting situations as possible.

I know something about Iowa myself; was brought up there. It rates as rock-ribbed Republican; gave Herbert Hoover nearly 250,000 majority in 1928, but that was abnormal. Ordinarily its G. O. P. margin is about 80,000. Senator Brookhart's label is Republican, but, as is well known, he is so radical that the "regulars" will hardly recognize him. Indeed it will be recalled that Daniel P. Steck, a Democrat, nosed him out in 1924. That is, although Brookhart was certified as elected, Steck beat him on a contest. I always doubted that it was a fair decision, but the state vote was mighty close, anyway—plainly implying that an enormous number of Republican ballots must have been cast for the Democratic candidate. In 1928 Brookhart got in again.

Iowa shifts curiously from extreme conservatism to extreme liberalism. It had William B. Allison, an ultra-old guardman, and Jonathan P. Dolliver, an early progressive, in the senate at the same time years ago. It elected the late Senator Albert B. Cummins as a progressive in 1908, but he turned conservative and Brookhart beat him. Then the intensely conservative Steck beat Brookhart. In 1930, with Brookhart once more in office, the Hawkeye folk chose L. J. Dickinson as his colleague, a return to conservatism.

Hills To Climb
Jobs To Be Done
And The Road Never Ending
We talk as if everything were finished.

As if we had come a long way, up through the ages, to stand at last, our journey ended, on the summit of the hill we saw so long ago.

We know we're imperfect. Know we have our weaknesses and our dreadful foolishnesses. No preaching man need tell us about them. We can see them for ourselves. We know what they are.

But somehow we seem to be always assuming that the human race has reached its goal at last and ought to be able to lie down, now and look at the long road it has traveled—see the twisting and the turning—see the swamps and the precipices—see savagery and barbarism and wars and wickedness and failure and triumph—and rest our weary bones in humble victory.

We talk about nature and evolution and unceasing change. We hear the astronomers talk about the stars and the blazing suns and how they are young and then old and how our own sun is gradually getting colder (or perhaps it isn't). And we talk as if we were outside of nature, set aside for some special purpose, all by ourselves.

The state was dry in my youthful days there. In 1889, for the first time in its history it elected a Democratic governor, Horace Boies, as a wet and kept him for two terms, when the G. O. P. surrendered to prohibition modification; thereupon it reappeared in the Republican column—but wet again shortly before the country did.

Was it as radical that Brookhart was defeated for renomination the other day by Henry Field, the celebrated seed merchant and radio broadcaster?

Authorities whose acquaintance with Hawkeye affairs is two decades closer to the present than mine say they surmise that Iowa farmers are disappointed at the senator's failure to obtain anything effective in agriculture's aid, despite the vehemence of his utterances, and incline to try someone whose tone is milder, but they hardly believe Field's victory implies any decided swing toward conservatism, because Field himself is no conservative.

From all accounts the Iowa press was mainly strongly anti-Brookhart.

It seems that the most was made of the showing that he has five relatives on the government payroll, that he has supplemented his salary by delivering Chautauque lectures, and that he once outraged the laws of etiquette by accepting an invitation to dinner at the senate floor, that intoxicants were served there.

This raises the prohibition question. Wets, at least, insist that the state is reverting to its standpoint of the Horace Boies period. Field is a dry, to be sure, but in the late campaign it is said he kept very still about it; Brookhart is a dry irreconcilable.

As against the senator's very poor publicity, the seed merchant is described too, as a highly gifted advertiser of his own merits—with a first-class radio station to advertise them over.

But suppose Brookhart should run independently—as is suggested. Democrats lick their chops at this idea. In Editor Louis Murphy of the Dubuque Telegraph they have, even Republican admit, a formidable candidate as a Jeffersonian can be in Iowa. A wet purpose, all by ourselves.

Or if we don't talk, that's how we feel about things. Well, it isn't true. We haven't reached the end of the road. We are on no final summit. There are still hills to climb. You can see them, snow covered, shining in the sun, over there in the distance.

We are on our way. . . . And we needn't be taking our troubles and our worries as personal insults, as the final brutal bludgeons of fate. They are growing pains, that's what they are. Struggling, heaving, journeying pains.

We aren't outside of nature. Nature is in us, too. We are changing like everything else. The hills are worn down and lifted up again. So are we. Nature does things to worms and snails and furry field mice and great elephants; she does not overlook us. Beneath her tremendous hand we are also shaped for some future function. And nature that is beyond us is also within us, like the air we breathe.

It's strange, but it's true. We are always struggling, always changing. The road never quite ends. There are always hills to climb. We never reach perfection. . . . It would be a dull, dangerous and stupid life if we did.

to boot. His friends declare he has a fighting chance anyway; a cinch against a split opposition.

Just prior to the North Carolina primary as good a judge of Tarheel politics as Managing Editor P. D. McLean of the Raleigh Times assured me that wet sentiment had gained so much in his state that a certain candidate he mentioned—one "Bob" Reynolds—would make a respectable showing in the contest as a rival of Senator Cameron Morrison for the Democratic nomination.

"He will not win," said Editor McLean, "but he will get a creditable vote, simply on account of his wetness."

Judge, then, of my surprise (I will guarantee that it surprised Editor McLean also) upon reading in the papers, the day after the ballot, that Robert R. Reynolds had walked off with a nice plurality over Senator Morrison. There were two other aspirants and Candidate Reynolds had not a majority over all (hence a run-off between himself and the senator will be necessary) but he was high man among the contenders; the senator second.

On investigation I learned that Senator Morrison:

1. Gave grave offense to Tarheel Republicans by supporting confirmation of the appointment late in 1930 of Frank R. McNinch, a North Carolina Hoovercrat in 1928, to the Federal Power commission.

2. Angered many veterans by opposing (or being so quoted) the bonus.

3. Was too dry, as related by Editor McLean, for today's conditions.

The run-off is July 2.

The North Carolina consensus here is that the senator will win it narrowly. Dispatches report the two low candidates as ready to support Reynolds, but the Carolinians express doubt that they can deliver their followings. They say the state is wetter than it was, but probably not that wet yet; also that they do not consider Reynolds, while likable, of senatorial proportions, and they predict that the voters, on a second thought, will agree with them. Without knowing anything about it, I can only recall that I was told he couldn't win once before, but he did.

FACTS AND FANCIES

For the warm weather, if you are fortunate in having a porch or a back yard, by all means serve as many meals there as possible. Card tables will be found useful in these out-of-door meals, and a tea cart will save many steps. If you do not have the tea cart, then several large trays will save steps for you. In fact, each member of the family may have his own tray and help himself to the dishes he wishes, in the kitchen, and carry the tray out onto the porch.

For these informal picnic meals you will find a hot casserole dish a good one, for the casseroles stay hot a long time and are usually easy to prepare. A double boiler, the bottom compartment filled with boiling water just before bringing the utensil out, will keep vegetables hot for quite a while.

How Indigestion May Be Reflex

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

We pointed out yesterday that the digestive tract being the oldest part of our animal organism is particularly likely to be upset whenever anything happens to the whole body, either in the way of physical disease or mental distress.

Most indigestion, in other words, is not due to actual organic disease of the organs of digestion. Most indigestion is reflex. Some of it is reflex from blood disease or heart disease. The largest part is reflex from nervous disease. It is truly nervous dyspepsia.

Take the case of "biliousness." Most doctors scoff at the idea of there being any such thing as biliousness. And in the literal interpretation of the term, they are right. Biliousness means a disease due to the absorption of bile or the abnormal accumulation of bile in the system. No such condition can be proved to exist.

Yet patients continue to complain of biliousness. What do they mean by it? Usually they say it comes on in attacks. The symptoms are a logy feeling, a feeling of stoppage of the intestines, a little nausea, headache, and spots before the eyes. They always feel that if they can get "cleaned out" they will be better. This gets all the bile out of their systems, according to their theory.

Yet medical men say their theory is wrong. That there is no such thing as biliousness. But, you may ask, if it isn't biliousness, what is the cause of these sensations they have?

Well, the real hints to the situation are that it comes on in attacks, with nausea, headache, and spots before the eyes. In short, what they call "biliousness" is usually a mild form of migraine. And migraine is a functional disease of the nervous system.

The reflex dyspepsia of gallstones is another very frequent form of indigestion in which the exciting cause is outside the stomach. True enough, gallstones form in the gall bladder and the gallbladder is part of the digestive system. But to the extent that the gallbladder is outside the actual muscular tube of the stomach and intestines when it sets up symptoms ascribable to them, the symptoms are reflex.

I am referring now to gallbladder symptoms that are readily recognized as originating in the gallbladder. In other words, not to colic from gallstones or pain over the gallbladder due to inflammation. The reflex symptoms are different. When patients with reflex gallbladder symptoms are observed by the X-ray the entire stomach and intestinal tract are seen to be in a state of spasm. This is the cause of the symptoms of abdominal constriction, nausea, eructation of gas, and other dyspeptic symptoms of gallbladder disease. It is, of course, one of the forms of dyspepsia that can be relieved by surgery.

Answers: Many skin diseases are due to nervous reactions.

UNDECIDED: It seems to me that you know this young man well enough so that no one could truthfully say that you were running after him if you invited him to the picnic. He might not care to accept the invitation, however, as his friends might razz him for going with a "lot of young kids." However, no harm in asking him.

BOB: Oh my, yes, a boy of 17 can be very much in love, but usually it is not the kind that lasts, and the girl who is the object of it is not the type that he later chooses to be his wife.

I think you are very wise not to write mushy letters to this girl. Nothing looks quite so foolish to a man in after years as these sentimental epistles.

I see no reason, however, why you can't be good friends, write to one another and dance together. And you can even be sure she is a good girl, if you love—well, something happens to prove to you that she is not.

Grace May Be Acquired

By GLADYS GLAD

Grace is something that the average woman usually doesn't spend very much thought on. As a rule, she figures that she either has it or she doesn't have it—and she lets it go at that.

She's wrong there, though. For practically every woman is born with a certain amount of natural grace. And it's up to her to develop it. Naturally, if she lets her muscles become stiff and inflexible, awkwardness in her movements may result. But if she keeps the muscles of her body supple and pliant, her natural grace will assert itself, and her movements will consistently be easy, graceful ones.

Most exercises usually possess only one or two corrective qualities. But there's one exercise I know of that is beneficial for virtually the entire body. It is essentially a general grace exercise and has no competitor with the exception of swimming, for it utilizes almost every muscle in the body. It's rather a difficult movement to do properly at first, but perfection comes with practice, you know.

To execute this exercise, you should be in your stockings or bare feet and should be clothed in a loose garment of some description. Stand erect with your arms at your sides. Then with a well-rounded swing, raise your arms upward and rise on the tip of your right foot, extending your left leg backward and upward as far as possible. When doing this movement, you should arch your back so that your chest is raised and your head thrown back. This exercise should then be repeated on the tip of the left foot.

Because of the co-ordinated movement of all the principal muscles of the body, this constitutes one of the most effective grace exercises ever devised. It's an excellent exercise, and once you have gained a sense of balance, you can vary it a bit by taking a few running steps first, lightly balancing a few seconds on your toes, and then assuming the described posture. And if you practice this with sufficient frequency, it will keep your muscles flexible, and your body free and graceful.

Andersons Beat Langs To Go Into Loop Tie

HUGE THROG ROARS SUPPORT AS CHAMPS DROP CRUCIAL GAME

Kersey Pitches And Bats
Runners - Up To Victory

An orchid for Anderson's Abattoirs who humbled the mighty Lang Chevrolets, 8 to 6, in a thrill-filled National League softball engagement witnessed by an overflow crowd at Cox Field Friday night.

While the great throng of on-lookers roared approval, Anderson's team, the people's choice, snapped the six-game winning streak of the city champions and promoted itself into a tie with Langs for the league leadership.

Anderson's won a popular victory, making amends for a 4 to 2 defeat encountered in a contest with the Chevrolets on the first round of play.

Brilliant pitching by Delbert Kersey, his great batting and team defensive play of a sparkling nature brought the Abattoirs their reward.

Kersey limited the Lang batters to eight hits, knocked two singles and a home run in four times up and received great fielding support, particularly from Gene Leahy, second baseman, who made one remarkable stop of a grounder and turned in a no less brilliant catch of a mean fly back of first base.

Harry Williams, Lang hurler, also allowed only eight hits, but his usually fine support betrayed him this time at critical moments, and the champions were charged with six errors.

In order to win, Anderson's team was compelled to come from behind and overcome a three-run lead established by Langs in the first three innings.

The champions tallied two runs in the second inning when Joe Smittle drew Kersey's only pass of the contest and rode home on the crest of a triple by "Happy" Davis, who scored himself on an out at first.

Anderson's got one run back in the third when the second when Milburn lifted a high fly to right and Fred Lang dropped the ball close to the foul line after a hard run. Before he could retrieve the sphere, Milburn had completed the circuit.

Langs scored twice in the third on two hits and an error. Correll off with a single and was forced at second by Williams, with Snell at third base making a nice play with a single to right, and both runners moved up on a passed ball. Lee Ruse then grounded to Joe Zenni, and the Abattoir shortstop threw too hurriedly, making a wild peg past first base that permitted both runners to cross the plate.

Williams was unable to locate the plate for the first two Anderson batters up in the fourth round, walking Zenni and Birk on eight straight balls. Milburn was retired on an infield fly, but the stage was set for Kersey to contribute to his own cause.

Williams grooved one for Delbert, who slammed the ball on a line over the right field fence for a homer, scoring the two runners ahead of him and squaring the score.

Anderson's inspired by their pitcher's batting exploits, won the game in the fifth stanza, scoring three more runs after two were out, but it took an error to pave the way. With two down, Snell lofted to Lang, who muffed the ball and gave Anderson's their chance.

Zenni redeemed himself for a couple of fielding miscues, by hitting safely to left field, after which Dick Birk got a rather fluky double. His bounder to third base struck the bag and bounced high over Smith's head. Snell and Zenni raced over the plate and when Bell's relay from left field was wild, Birk also continued home from second.

Anderson's added their last run in the sixth. Kersey got his third straight hit of the contest, a single to right, and came all the way around when Joe Smittle made two errors on the single play. Joe kicked the ball into right field, then his throw to the plate missed its intended mark—Phil Corr—by a city block.

Golf Facts, Not Theories DON'T TRY IMPOSSIBLE SHOTS FROM BAD LIES DECLARES ALEX

"How do you get out of a bunker when the ball is close to a high bank?" asks a pupil. "The other day I found the ball under a 10-foot embankment and I took several strokes before I could get out of trouble. It cost me an eight on that hole and ruined an otherwise good score."

The answer to this question is worth considering. I have seen many fine players in the same fix as my correspondent; players who would be able to score in the seventies if it were not for the difficulty they have in making such shots. The ball being in such a lie brings up a seemingly impossible situation but the method of getting out of this kind of trouble is comparatively simple.

In the first place such a situation is not impossible. The only trouble is that under such circumstances the player attempts to do the impossible. In spite of the fact that he knows the shot he attempts would be nothing short of miraculous even for Bobby Jones if he does not alter his line of play. He insists on shooting directly for the pin instead of taking a line that will get him out of trouble with little or no effort.

As the accompanying illustration shows, a ball played almost parallel to the embankment offers a simple solution to getting out of the deepest bunker. Obviously such a shot may cause the ball to travel away from the hole, but to my knowledge there is no rule against this.

Even if it costs you a stroke to take an indirect line to the hole, accept the penalty for the poor shot that put your ball in the bunker. You'll gain by it in the average and always in the long run.

CONTRACTOR AND BEAVERCREEK SCHOOL BOARD SETTLE DISPUTE

Early resumption of construction work by The W. H. Howard Construction Co., Columbus, general contractor, on the unfinished centralized school building in Beaver Creek Twp. was forecast Friday by Albert Ankeney, president of the township board of education.

It became known that the school board and the Columbus contractor had reached a verbal compromise agreement, at a board meeting Wednesday night, whereby the firm's contract is expected to be renewed next Monday night.

Work on the incomplete school building has been suspended since December 12 last, but Mr. Ankeney said the construction will probably be resumed in a few days. It is hoped to have the building finished and ready for occupancy by school children of the district by the middle of September or the first of October. The structure will not be complete, however, by the time the fall school term is scheduled to begin.

Details of the compromise settlement of the differences between the school board and the contractor were not divulged by Mr. Ankeney, but the plan, he admitted, calls for a certain amount of strengthening of the present construction.

The board, a few weeks ago, had passed a resolution declaring the Columbus firm's contract terminated for refusal to consider certain major contract changes the board had advocated.

Now, after six months of uncertainty and litigation, the board hopes the tangled affairs of the school district involving erection of the new $180,000 school on the Dayton Pike, between Alpha and Zimmerman, have been smoothed out.

by Police Chief O. H. Cornwell in exchange for an outdoor view camera to complete his photographic equipment at police headquarters, was tried and not found wanting in a test Thursday.

The chief "broke in" the camera at the expense of Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith, who agreed to the first unofficial "sitting."

The experiment was pronounced a success, the camera standing up well under the severe strain imposed by the fact the subject assumed a severe expression that augured ill for the result.

Two photos of the judge were taken and may be hung up at a prominent place in police headquarters as a warning to law violators that justice can be stern as well as lenient.

While the judge could not be coaxed into smiling when he posed for the picture, the judicial mien vanished when he saw the prints after they were developed from the negative.

"I despise the idea of anybody trying to look pleasant when having a picture taken," alibied his honor.

"Perhaps the environment wasn't just right," suggested the chief, helpfully, pointing out the difficulty of looking pleasant in the cell room at police headquarters, where the camera and 1550-watt photographic floodlights are stationed.

The camera now a proven success, Chief Cornwell is pleased with the swap he made.

The chief is adept at photography and his equipment, procured little by little over a period of four or five years, is complete. He has developing equipment and a laboratory in an annex to his private office.

Who's Who in Washington

BY CHARLES P. STEWART

Charles L. McNary

FEW POLITICAL "confabs" are held at the White House to which Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon is not invited. Among the national lawmakers none passes a week-end on the Rapidan often than he.

"The Oregonian is a member of the presidential inner circle, in fact.

McNary never has been recognized by the progressives as one of themselves. Nevertheless, he was co-sponsor, with Representative Gilbert N. Haugen, of Iowa, of the celebrated McNary-Haugen agricultural equalization bill. This was regarded as a rather radical measure—enough so to make ultra-conservatives look somewhat askance upon the Pacific coast senator.

Slightly too advanced, thus, for strict G. O. P. regularity, yet insufficiently advanced to pass the insurgents' test, he gravitated quite naturally into the group known as the "young guard" or "young Turks"—President Hoover's particular following on Capitol Hill.

Perhaps the consideration that he attended Stanford in his youth weighs additionally in his favor at the executive mansion.

The senator takes the responsibilities of his status with seriousness. He will hardly venture a weather prediction without pausing, apparently to wonder whether or not there is a chance that he will be committing the administration to some policy which may compromise it in the long run.

The "young Turkish" organization scarcely has the tangibility to acknowledge formal leadership, but if it had a leader, McNary undoubtedly would hold the job. He would claim it, anyway.

Suburb Is Movie Site All Happens One Night

The Vicki Baum influence in Hollywood has been far-reaching although the German novelist's sojourn in the picture capital was brief.

Hotels, railroad stations and steamships have been glorified and now Paramount will perform a like service for the suburbs. Vera Caspary's novel, originally called "Suburb" will be made into a film under the title of "The Night of June 13."

The story lists the events of a single night in a small community on the outskirts of a city. In the talkie, Clive Brook, Frances Dee and the very blond and increasingly successful Gene Raymond, will have parts. Stephen Roberts will direct this Paramount picture.

Victor Varconi, who, like many foreign actors, had a lonesome time of it at first, is now becoming popular. He left Hollywood Friday for Europe where he will play the lead in a picture being made by Universal. The setting will be the Austrian Tyrol and the director, Louis Trenker, who also directed Varconi in "The Doomed Battalion." The picture will be a costume film of the Napoleonic era.

Kay Francis and her husband, Kenneth MacKenna are also headed towards Europe, where they expect to spend a leisurely three months' vacation. On their schedule are Vienna, the Reinhardt Drama Festival at Salzburg, Paris, where MacKenna went to school for fifteen years, and eventually the island of Majorca. There they will meet Ken's brother, Joe Mielzner and his bride, the former Annie Laurie Jacques. Mielzner is the lad who designed the costumes and scenery for Katherine Cornell's production of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

Polly Walters, who made the 'hello' girl a classic on the screen, got the job as Bert Wheeler's partner in his personal appearance act Dorothy Lee. It seems, what more money than Bert was getting alone. Polly gets ten weeks work out of the job.

Mitzi Green, the mimic, has a new three-year contract with Radio Pictures. She will do eighteen featurettes, six each year and also have the title role in "Little Orphan Annie."

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, having completed a full-length picture, ture, "Pack Up Your Troubles," will sail for Europe July 8 with their wives. They expect to return in September.

Marion Davies' new picture from Frances Marion's original story, as yet untitled, will include Robert Montgomery, Billie Dove, Zasu Pitts and James Gleason in the cast.

Twenty Years '12- Ago -'32

Mr. Ed Hunt is displaying a fine mounted specimen of an eagle in his store window on W. Main St. This bird, measuring eighty inches from tip to tip, was shot near Spring Valley.

Oscar Sturgeon, drayman, sustained a severe leg injury when a 600-pound box he was attempting to place on his dray, slipped and fell on his right knee.

At a meeting of the Orient Hill Welfare League, at the home of Sherman Spahr, plans were made for a general Fourth of July celebration in that part of the city. There will be sack and potato races, ball games and a fireworks display at night.

At the rate we're using the sun it will probably last for a few million years, anyway.

Jacob, the Aged Father

When Joseph's brothers returned from their second trip to Egypt for corn they brought their father the good news, "Joseph is yet alive, and he is ruler over all the land of Egypt." It is no wonder that it seemed to Jacob too good to be true.

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Genesis 46:1-7, 26-30; 47:7.

But when Jacob saw the wagons Joseph had sent to carry him and his family down into Egypt, Jacob believed and began to prepare for the journey. In answer to his prayers for guidance God assured him of his presence and blessing on the journey.

Joseph went up to the land of Goshen to meet his father whom he had not seen for 20 years, "and fell on his neck, and wept on his neck a good while." Jacob was so happy that he said that now he was ready to die since he had found Joseph again.

Joseph was not ashamed of his aged father even though he was a famine-stricken shepherd. But he brought him before Pharaoh and introduced him to the king. And Jacob gave the king his blessing. Thus Joseph teaches us to honor our parents.

GOLDEN TEXT—Exodus 20:12—"Honor thy father and thy mother."

"SIX
CYLINDERS
NO LESS,"
says America

Anything more and you sacrifice economy—
anything less and you
sacrifice smoothness.

BUYERS everywhere are comparing low-priced cars. Lifting hoods. Counting cylinders. And the result? An overwhelming verdict for the six, in preference to cars of fewer or more cylinders.

"SIX CYLINDERS. No more—No less!" And America backs up that conviction by purchasing more six-cylinder Chevrolets—far more—than any other type of low-priced car. Since January 1st, buyers have chosen more Chevrolet Sixes than the combined total of all fours and all eights priced under $1000.

Why such decisive preference? America knows its automobiles . . . and America has found, through experience, what engineers have known for a long time: that real economy and real smoothness can be combined in one—and only one—type of engine: the SIX!

With more than six cylinders, you sacrifice Chevrolet's famous economy of gas, oil and upkeep.

With less than six cylinders, you sacrifice built-in smoothness.

But with a six—a Chevrolet Six—nothing is sacrificed. You get everything you want.

You get economy—the greatest all-round economy available in today's motor car market.

You get smoothness—the built-in smoothness that makes driving really restful and enjoyable.

You get power, too—60 horsepower. And speed—65 to 70 miles an hour, easily! And pick-up—a smooth, lightning-fast getaway from a standstill to 35 miles an hour in less than 7 seconds!

So, when buying a new low-priced car, settle the question of cylinders RIGHT, and you can't go WRONG. "SIX CYLINDERS. No more—No less!"

In addition to a six-cylinder engine, Chevrolet provides Free Wheeling; Syncro-Mesh shifting; big, spacious Fisher bodies; and, due to new reduced prices, you'll be money ahead buying a new Chevrolet instead of keeping the old car.
